Chapter One

IN a four-engined Consolidated bomber, converted for transport service and operated by United States army officers, I left Mitchell Field, New York, on Aug. 26 (1942), to see what I could of the world and the war, its battle fronts, its leaders, and its people.

Exactly 49 days later, on Oct. 14, I landed in Minneapolis, Minn. I had encircled the world, not in the northern latitudes where the circumference is small, but on a route which crossed the equator twice.

I had traveled a total of 31,000 miles, which—looked at as a figure—still impresses and almost bewilders me. For the net impression of my trip was not one of distance from other peoples, but of closeness to them.

The extraordinary fact is that to cover this enormous distance we were in the air a total of only 160 hours.

There are no distant points in the world any longer. Our thinking in the future must be worldwide.

Upon arriving in Egypt, I accepted eagerly an invitation from Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery to see the front for myself, at El Alamein.

With Mike Cowles and Maj. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, then commander of United States forces in Egypt, we drove out of Cairo on the desert road to the front.

Almost before we were out of the suburbs, General Montgomery launched into a detailed description of a battle which for the first time in months had stopped Rommel dead.

At first it was hard for me to understand why the general kept repeating, in a quiet way, "Egypt has been saved." The enemy was deep in Egypt and had not retreated.

I remembered the skepticism I had found in Cairo, born of earlier British claims.

But before I left the trailer in which General Montgomery had rigged up his map room, I had learned more about desert warfare, and he had convinced me that something more than the ubiquitous self-confidence of the British officer and gentleman lay behind his assurance that the threat to Egypt had been liquidated.

The next day we toured the front and I saw with my own eyes the clusters of tank and artillery troops, the occasional fighter-plane bases, and the formidable supply units which constitute a front in the fluid, checkerboard type of warfare that goes on in the desert.

On the way back to General Montgomery's headquarters, he summed up what I had seen and heard.

"With the superiority in tanks and planes that I have established as a result of this battle and with Rommel's inability to get reinforcements of materiel across the eastern Mediterranean — for our air forces are destroying four out of every five of his materiel transports—it is now mathematically certain that I will eventually destroy Rommel. This battle was the critical test."

Two memories stand out in my mind today of Alexandria. The first was a long discussion with Rear Admiral Rene Godfroy, in command of the forlorn units of the French fleet in the harbor.

He was sorely troubled by the turn of events in France and almost uneducated in any meaning of the war outside his simple officer's discipline.

Friendship

He had obviously been deeply embittered by the naval actions of the British against French ships after June, 1940. But he expressed great friendship for the United States and a desire for our victory.

My second memory of Alexandria is of a dinner that night at the home of Admiral Harwood, hero of the epic fight of the Exeter against the Graf Spee in South American waters, and now commander of the British navy in the eastern Mediterranean.

He invited to dine with us 10 of his compatriots in the naval, diplomatic, or consular service in Alexandria.

I tried to draw out these men, all of them experienced and able administrators of the British empire, on what they saw in the future and especially in the future of the colonial system and of our

BRITISH SINK 2 AXIS SHIPS, BLAST FRANCE

Planes Attack Enemy Convoy Off Dutch Coast, Hit French Rail, Air Centers.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 28—British Typhoons and Hurricanes sank two enemy ships early today, drove another blazing onto a beach and brought three more to a standstill after a night in which RAF Mosquito squadrons winged deep into France to hammer airports and railways in the mounting allied aerial offensive.

The latest engagement was reported by the air ministry to have taken place off the Dutch coast, where swift RAF fighters found five enemy coastal vessels sailing in a line.

These vessels were attacked in waves and the final wave of fliers also attacked ships, believed to be tugs, trying to aid the convoy. One RAF plane was lost, the air ministry announced, in contrast to the German high command's claim that nine were shot down. The Germans also asserted the convoy suffered only minor damage.

Attack Convoy

Hurtling through intense anti-aircraft fire, fighters closed in to 500 or 600 yards with guns blazing in the initial attack on the convoy. An explosion and yellow flames suggesting an ammunition fire burst out of one 800-ton ship, which was beached, the air ministry said.

In the blows by the Mosquitos the air ministry said two railway yards were hit, locomotives were raked with machine-gun fire and R-boats off Cherbourg were straddled with bombs.

There were no indications that British planes were over Germany during the night.

It was the first time after seven consecutive nightly attacks against the Ruhr and western Germany that the RAF failed to strike at war plants in Germany proper.

It was the ninth night, however, of the current allied aerial offensive against Hitler's Europe.

Bad weather hampered operations Saturday. American bomber crews returned with bomb racks still loaded because they could not spot their objectives through heavy cloud formations.

London had a brief daylight alert early today and one enemy plane was reported destroyed off the southeast coast. In all other Sunday operations five enemy fighter planes were shot down.

War Summary

LONDON—British planes bag two enemy ships in convoy off Dutch coast; also hit rail and air centers in France.

AFRICA—U. S. bombers blast Greek airfields near Athens; RAF planes strike at rail and air centers in Naples area.

SOUTH PACIFIC—Attacks on two Japanese submarines over the week-end, 200 miles southwest of Suva in the Fiji islands and in the southern Coral sea, were reported. One possibly was destroyed. New raids on Japanese strongpoints in Solomons were disclosed.

ALEUTIANS—Main Japanese camp area on Kiska, last of the Aleutian islands remaining to the enemy, was blasted by six great raids on Friday, and joint Army and Navy attacks indicated invasion might be near.

BURMA—Without loss, U. S. medium bombers again attacked enemy held railroads and plants in central Burma and the RAF bombed Japanese troop quarters on Akyab island.

U. S. Bombers in Second Big Blow at Greek Bases

Hammer Airfields Near Athens While RAF Pounds Naples; Italians Declare Invasion Near.

By The Associated Press

Pounding at axis targets in coast areas of the Balkans, Greece for the second time in a week and British planes each day of the week, American heavy bombers have stepped up their assault on the Nazi-dominated Balkans. Fortresses and Liberators roared over Athens Sunday, it was disclosed today, and Naples was battered again Saturday in the powerful allied air offensive overspreading the Mediterranean.

The American heavies of the Middle East command rained bombs upon the Elevsis and Hassani airdromes, dramatically reviving the threat of allied invasion in the eastern Mediterranean, and creating heavy damage.

The heavy Mediterranean actions brought frank warnings from Italian newspapers that invasion was imminent.

Meanwhile over Europe, RAF mosquito bombers sustaining the greatest air attack of the war through its ninth night, slashed at railways and airports in France last night to sever more arteries of Germany's invasion-defense behind her "Atlantic Wall."

The new raids on Greek airdromes followed a 50-plane attack Thursday on Nazis suffered at Salonika. To the mounting consecutive axis defeats, attempting to build up their strength in the Balkans was left the decision whether the bombings were the customary prelude to attack or a feint to hide operations elsewhere.

Despite savage efforts by defense forces to break up the raids, the four engined bombers executed their missions and returned without a loss.

"At both targets our aircraft were attacked by large formations of enemy fighters and fighter-bombers, the latter making unsuccessful attempts at aerial bombing," said the North Air Force communique. "Seven enemy aircraft were destroyed, with eight others listed as probably destroyed."

Naples Blasted

Wellington bombers of the North African air forces dropped bombs in the dock area and on industrial plants of Naples in its attack Saturday night, the allied headquarters announced.

Six axis planes, attacking allied shipping Saturday, were shot down by coastal air force planes and two more were brought down by naval gunfire, it was announced.

Two allied aircraft were said to be missing from all of the operations.

(The Italian Monday communique, broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press, said allied planes attacked Gerbini, Catania province, yesterday and caused some civilian casualties. Reggio Calabria and several other smaller localities on the toe of the Italian boot were reported raided last night.)

The allied bombers roared over ravaged Messina, the northeast Sicily ferry port, to reach Naples.

Strategic sections of Messina lay in ruins after three whipsaw aerial assaults by allied bombers in 36 hours, the latest Friday night.

(The Paris radio declared today that unnamed German landing craft had passed through the Bosphorus from the Black Sea, enroute to the Aegean, as permitted by international convention.

Believes Invasion Near

(Elsie Simpson of The Associated Press said in a copyrighted story from Washington last night that "trans-Mediterranean military operations on a major scale (are) closely impending" and that "the time element is of vital importance."

Italian editors, warning invasion was near, pointed to heavy allied convoys in the Mediterranean as one indication.

The Sunday Italian communique asserted axis planes torpedoed one vessel set afire a tanker and damaged 10 transports in the Sicilian straits Saturday, and the German Sunday war bulletin substantially supported the claim.

A German radio commentator declared landing boats were included in the convoy and that one escorting warship was hit by a heavy bomb.)

OHIO WELFARE EXPANSION SET

Post-War Projects Call for $7,000,000 Program at Institutions.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 28—Plans for a $7,000,000 post-war expansion program for Ohio's welfare institutions are nearing completion, State Welfare Director Herbert R. Mooney said today.

New construction and repairs creating additional facilities for approximately 5,000 patients at state hospitals for the insane and feeble-minded will get under way as soon as war-vital materials are released for civilian projects, Mooney said.

The necessary funds have been made available by a legislative appropriation of $8,100,000, of which $2,000,000 is earmarked for immediate institutional rehabilitation projects in 1943 and 1944.

By preparing post-war blueprints now, Mooney asserted, "we not only take part in a program to provide returning soldiers with immediate employment, but we also will be able to correct overcrowded institutional conditions as soon as possible."

The construction program calls for enlargements of the Hawthornden State Hospital, between Akron and Cleveland, and the institution for the feeble-minded at Apple Creek, near Wooster. New buildings costing upwards of $7,500,000 will more than double patient facilities at Hawthornden and triple accommodations at Apple Creek.

Other institutions where new hospital units are planned include Athens State Hospital, Columbus State Hospital, Dayton State Hospital, Lima State Hospital, Hospital for Epileptics at Gallipolis, and Orient institution for the feeble-minded.

COMING TO WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 28 — The White House today confirmed Algiers reports that Gen. Henri Giraud would come to Washington for an official visit.

ONE OF THE LAST to be evacuated from Bataan, Capt. Juanita Redmond of the Army Nurse Corps looks over an official pamphlet that urges graduate nurses to join the armed forces. Captain Redmond is in New York, meeting with a recruiting board.

ONE DIES AS HE TRIES TO SAVE YOUNG FRIEND

Tragedy Occurs as Marion Lad Slips from Dam; Bodies Not Yet Recovered.

Richard Flinchbaugh, 12, of 501 Blaine avenue, and Harlow Hindman, 15, of the Fields road, east of Marion, drowned at the Drake dam on the Whetstone river this morning about 9:30. The dam is about 2½ miles east of Five Points.

The two boys had been swimming at the dam this morning. Neither of the bodies had been recovered at noon today. A searching party led by Sheriff J. W. Harruff is dragging the river for the bodies. The sheriff went to Camp John T. Owens shortly after arriving at the scene of the drowning to secure grappling hooks for the search.

The two boys, along with Robert Hindman, brother of one of the victims, were swimming in the river this morning. Flinchbaugh, who could not swim, wandered out on the dam and slipped off it. Harlow, who was a good swimmer, immediately jumped off the dam in an attempt to save Flinchbaugh. Both were pulled under by the struggles of Flinchbaugh. The river was about three feet higher than usual today. About a foot of water was said to be flowing over the dam.

Hear Call for Help

Paul and Harold Bolt, brothers, were walking on the Roberts road, about 100 yards from the dam, at the time of the drowning. They heard Hindman's screams and hurried to the nearby Drake farm, operated by H. V. Barnette. They told residents of the farm about the drowning. The sheriff and his deputies and farmers from the surrounding territory were summoned to the scene.

A search for the bodies was begun shortly after this under the supervision of the sheriff. The following aided in the search: Leo Barnette, H. V. Barnette, Dean Barnette, Clarence Fields, Floyd Stumbo, Simon Stumbo, R. B. Windon, W. H. Nesbitt, Sanford Seckel, Joe Seckel, Lyle Messenger, Sheriff Harruff, and Deputy Lelloy Retterer. Joe Seckel is the grandfather of Harlow Hindman, one of the victims.

Visiting Hindman Home

Flinchbaugh was visiting with the Hindmans on Fields road. He went there last night and was to have left Wednesday.

Flinchbaugh was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Flinchbaugh of Blaine avenue. Hindman was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hindman of Fields road, which is about eight miles east of Marion.

Hindman in addition to his parents, is survived by three sisters, Vera, Ethel, and Ruth, and his brother, Bob, who was with him at the time of the drowning.

The Drake farm is owned by Ralph Augenstein. Mr. Barnette is the tenant farmer. The dam, which is near the Drake farm, is one of the many dams built in a government conservation program a few years back.

Hindman was born on February 20, 1927. He would have been a freshman in Caledonia High school this next school term. This spring and summer he had been working on various farms in the eastern part of Marion county.

Flinchbaugh would have been an eighth grade student at Thomas A. Edison Junior High school next school term. He attended the Epworth Methodist church, where his family are all members. Previously this summer, he had taken swimming lessons at the Y.M.C.A., where he was a member. Hindman's father is employed at the Carl Seckel Grocery store on North Main street.

MOST MINERS RESUME WORK

Pennsylvania Center of Only Opposition to Union Leaders' Plea To Go Back.

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, June 28—Heartened by a lusty back-to-work swing over the week-end, the greater part of the coal fields looked today for many more men to be back in the mines and a revived production effort to supply the fuels necessary for steel and other war-essential industries.

The "go to work" call sounded through many mining villages Sunday in the great Appalachian region, base of the industry, and scores of local units of the United Mine Workers voted to resume their jobs in the soft coal mines.

Full-scale operations were predicted by UMW leaders and others in most of the states, including the vast bituminous coal area of West Virginia with its 130,000 miners.

Opposition in Pennsylvania

Only in parts of Pennsylvania did the movement appear to encounter strong opposition and even there thousands of miners aligned themselves with those resuming coal digging.

The two areas in which the movement lagged, judging from the results of Sunday's miner rallies, were the central Pennsylvania soft coal and the eastern Pennsylvania anthracite field.

Unofficial estimates last week placed the number of idle miners

SAYS U. S. ANXIOUS TO RETURN MINES

Ickes Declares Government Wants Owners To Run Them.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28—Secretary Ickes told the house ways and means committee today the government has "no desire and no plans for the nationalization" of the coal industry and hopes to return the mines to private ownership "at the earliest possible moment."

He was unable to say, he added, when return would be possible but said the government, which took over the mines during the recent strike, would "seize the first opportunity to return them to private ownership."

That opportunity, he said, would come when there is "reasonable assurance" that the miners would work for private owners, or when the workers and the operators signed a contract.

By The Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, O., June 28 — First contingent of U. S. soldiers wounded on the African fighting front arrived at the new $5,000,000 Fletcher General Hospital here over the week-end. Nearly 100 were in the group.

CHARGE NEW YORKER WITH ESPIONAGE

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28—The justice department announced today the arrest of Ernest Frederick Lehmitz in New York City on charges of gathering espionage information for Germany.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, said Lehmitz had written letters to the German intelligence in Europe containing information on shipping conditions in New York harbor and describing troop and convoy movements.

The arrest was made by FBI agents on a warrant issued by the United States Commissioner in Brooklyn.

If convicted, Lehmitz would be subject to the death penalty or 30 years in prison.

Hoover said the man, a United States citizen, was born in 1886 at Hamburg, Germany.

REPORT U. S. BATTLESHIPS REACH MEDITERRANEAN

Stockholm Says American Ships Join British Fleet.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 28—A Reuters report from Stockholm said today that United States battleships have reached the Mediterranean and joined the British battle fleet.

The report, quoting the Scandinavian telegram bureau, came a day after the Italian fleet was reported to have sailed into the Mediterranean—perhaps for a fight, perhaps for a safer refuge from allied bombs pounding from bases of the mainland. The Italian fleet sailing was reported in a broadcast by Reuters, quoting an Italian radio report credited to the Rome newspaper Arriba.

No other story had any official confirmation.

GERMAN RAILWAYS DUE FOR BLASTING

Believe They'll Replace Ruhr as Bombers' Targets.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 28 — A new series of air blows at German's strained railway system was forecast by military observers today as a possible follow-up to the terrific battering of the industrial Ruhr in the allies' campaign of strategic bombing to sap the Nazis' strength.

This phase of the air war was suggested even as Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering was reported being lured into risking the German air force reserves he had been husbanding in a desperate attempt to ward off a knockout blow to the Ruhr.

Faced with being forced to make a quick shift of troops over long distances that separate the Russian, Italian and channel fronts, the Germans are relying heavily on a rail link-up which already has been under heavy attack.

Excursions against axis communications along the invasion coast have been costing the Germans between 100 and 150 locomotives monthly, London sources have estimated.

CONSIDER INCREASES IN SOLDIER FAMILY BENEFITS

Hearing Opened; War Department to Make Recommendation.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28—The war department is expected soon to submit to congress a compromise proposal for increasing the allowances for dependents of men in the armed forces and proponents predicted it would receive speedy approval.

A senate military affairs subcommittee called Brig. Gen. M. G. White before it in a closed session today as it began hearings on a bill by Senator Lodge (R-Mass) to increase the present dependency allowance by 15 per cent to meet rising living costs.

At the same time Chairman Johnson (D-Colo) made public a war department report urging the committee to delay action on the measure until it could present an analysis of the need for increases.

Extra War Stamp For Shangri-La, Drive Goal

Plans for a month-long bond drive beginning July 1 were announced today when Elmer J. Schoenlaub, Marion county bond chairman, appointed Jerry Passen as chairman of a committee for arrangements. The committee, which is composed of retailers, will meet tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Chamber of Commerce office to discuss plans.

In this drive, every man, woman and child will be asked to buy at least an extra $1 in war stamps to help build the aircraft carrier, Shangri-La, to be used for rebombing Tokyo and avenging the execution of Jimmy Doolittle's flyers. All employes in Marion's retail stores will be instructed in the selling of $1 extra in war stamps to every individual for building the Shangri-La.

WASHINGTON, June 28—America's $700,000,000 rubber industry by the end of this year will be capable of meeting all essential civilian as well as military requirements, Commerce Secretary Jones said today.

Manufacturing capacity of the 40 plants throughout the country by December will be in excess of 800,000 tons a year "which is more than we have ever used and sufficient for our essential purposes," Jones declared in an address prepared for a "Made in America Rubber" luncheon at Houston, Tex.

Congress Told Allies Rapidly Approaching "Final Victory"

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28—Congress was assured today the United Nations were rapidly approaching a "final victory" and that the war would be brought home to Japan in such a manner that "the whole empire will feel its full impact in a most violent and destructive way."

This statement from Lieut. General Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, was included in testimony made public by the senate appropriations committee as the senate made ready to pass the Army's $71,500,000,000 "decisive budget" war bill.

At one point, General McNarney told Senator Gurney (R-S.D.) the use of the word "rapidly" might have been an overstatement, but added:

"In the training and equipping of our armies and getting them ready for combat, we have made enormous progress in the last year. We have now committed to act, in concert with other United Nations, a rather large force."

Asserting that "strong and experienced enemies" confronted the United Nations on widely separated fronts, General McNarney nevertheless declared in a statement on that with confidence:

"The coordinated operation of our land and air forces is rapidly bringing us toward a final victory.

"Our operations in the Pacific have turned the tide of Japanese advance into a gradual withdrawal toward their home bases. Since our victory at Attu, the strategic movements of the Japanese have followed our lead.

"It is our intention to bring the war home to Japan in such a

Dewey, Willkie Continue As Favorites of G. O. P.

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., June 28—Republican sentiment on presidential candidates for 1944 serves Thomas E. Dewey again as the favorite. But in the month which has elapsed since Dewey's popularity showed a falling off last week Scripps-Howard

Dewey

Republican next year, many men to score gains in survey are Governor and Governor Saltonstall is up two points and one in the regular survey now being conducted on presidential possibilities by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Both Stassen, who resigned his governorship to join the Navy, and Governor Warren receive more votes they did last month.

In making its most recent check, the cross-section of voters who say they plan to vote Republican in next year's elections were asked:

"Which ONE of these men would you prefer as the Republican candidate for president next year?"

The persons being interviewed were shown a card listing the seven Republicans who have been widely discussed as possible candidates.

Here are the results:

Dewey	51
Willkie	22
MacArthur	13
Bricker	5
Stassen	4
Saltonstall	3
Warren	*

These are the views of the rank and file of the Republican Party and are not to be confused with the vote of Republican leaders.

It should be borne in mind that the present list is made up of the seven Republicans who as of today are most often mentioned as presidential possibilities for the Republicans. It is entirely possible that some new candidate may appear on the scene between now and convention time next spring, just as Willkie did in the spring of 1940.

MacArthur

Poll of House Offers Contrast

An interesting contrast to the rank and file vote is provided by a poll taken among Republican members of the House of Representatives by Representative Low E. Allen of Illinois. The results of this poll are as follows:

Dewey	51 votes
MacArthur	33 "
Bricker	29 "
Willkie	13 "
Taft	11 "
Martin	9 "
Stassen	6 "
Hoover	5 "
Vandenberg	4 "

Governor Dwight Green received three votes. Two votes went to Senator Lodge and one vote to Senator Byrd, McNary, James Farley and Wadsworth.

"Although Dewey leads the list of Republican presidential possibilities so far as the public and Republican congressmen are concerned, Willkie is the favorite with the majority of the Republican governors who attended the 36th annual Governors' Conference in Columbus, O.

"Of the 16 governors polled by The United Press, six voted for Mr. Willkie, four for Bricker, and two for Thomas E. Dewey. Three governors declined to give any opinion."

Party Contrasts

Whereas the vote among the Republican rank and file shows that none of the frequently mentioned candidates is preferred by a majority amongst Democrats, Roosevelt has everything his own way, as the rank and file choice for 1944. Roosevelt, a survey just completed shows, is now the choice of 82% of persons who plan to vote the Democratic ticket next year while his closest rival, Vice President Wallace, has only 9% of the votes.

The Republican party's chances of winning the election, Institute surveys show, depend largely upon whether the war is still in progress but even more important upon whether it is still in a critical stage.

A majority of voters polled throughout the country say they favor a Republican candidate if the war is over and if Roosevelt runs for a fourth term. If the war is still going on, but is in its final stages Roosevelt's chances, the survey shows would be no better than even.

By Sections

Dewey's greatest relative strength lies in the New England and Middle Atlantic areas. Willkie is at the head of the list in the Mountain and Far Western states. Bricker finds his greatest strength in the area comprising his home state, Ohio, and Illinois, Michigan and Indiana.

Willkie

Here is a picture of the vote by sections, outside of the normally Democratic South.

MORE FARM LABOR REQUESTS EXPECTED

Emergency Calls To Pour in at Extension Office.

O. E. Barks, assistant Marion county farm labor assistant, expects to handle more calls for emergency farm workers within the next two weeks than at any previous time this year. He added that he would like to see the county's farmers take inventory of the necessity of a program of business planning policy and what not during

Mr. Barks reports that on many county farms, barley harvesting is already under way.

Last week the special farm labor coordinator placed three schoolboys and three adults on county farms for full-time summer positions. However, many more workers than that will have to be obtained by July 15 in order to complete haying and harvesting tasks in July.

Some county farmers are seeking farm jobs to engage some of the large scale farming done on their farms. A Kentucky family was secured by Arthur Smith, county agricultural extension agent, earlier this year for tenant farming. However, more families are needed now.

Only one part-time city volunteer farm worker has been secured by Mr. Barks since a plea for such laborers was issued by the county agricultural office two weeks ago. This one man is employed on a county farm for afternoon work from 1 until 4 o'clock. Since most hay is made in the afternoon the services of this volunteer registrant are valuable, according to Mr. Barks and Mr. Smith.

But they point out that only one volunteer cannot do all the extensive farm work accumulated because of the dearth of workers. Registrations of many more will be needed before even a partial solution to the county farm labor problem can be effected.

God is the mountain of light, and He illumines one's way when one is obedient.—Mary Baker Eddy.

How Pay-As-You-Go Tax Works

Rules for Servicemen Complicated But They're Kind to Him.

By JAMES MARLOW and GEORGE ZIELKE

WASHINGTON, June 28 — For the man or woman going into the armed services, the new pay-as-you-go income tax law carries certain features to provide for refunds of taxes already paid in many cases.

Those entering the services this year—or who did so last year—get these special benefits.

Their 1942 taxes on all earned income up to $14,000 are cancelled.

In figuring whether they owe any 1943 taxes, they get an extra exemption of all service pay up to $1,500. That's in addition to the regular exemptions of $500 if single, $1,200 for a married couple, plus $350 for each dependent.

What this means, in effect, is this:

If a serviceman's income last year was all earned income, he won't owe any tax—and will be entitled to refund of tax payments made this year—unless he has 1943 civilian income of more than the regular exemptions (after the usual deductions).

1943 Tax May Be Increased

However, if he does owe a 1943 tax, it may be increased by up to 25 per cent—so the government tax experts have finally decided on a share of the cancellation provisions of the new law.

The civilian gets a cancellation of 75 per cent (or $50, whichever is greater) of the lower of 1942 or 1943 taxes. The uncancelled portion is stated by the law as an increase in 1943 tax.

So that while the average serviceman gets cancellation of the higher year's tax (assuming he made more in 1942), he must pay the lower 1943 tax (if any), plus this increase in his 1943 tax.

An additional 25 per cent if the tax is more than $66.67.

If the tax is between $50 and $66.67, the addition is the difference between the amount of the tax and $50.

(If the tax is $50 or less, there won't be any increase).

For instance:

If his 1943 tax on civilian income figured to $65, he would owe $80—$65 plus the difference between $65 and $50, or $15.

If his 1943 tax came to $80, he would owe an additional 25 per cent—making it $100 altogether.

But in general, this would mean simply a reduction in the amount of refund—and not more tax payments.

How It Works

Here's how it would work out:

Suppose a man owed a tax of $400 on his 1942 salary, and paid $200 of it in March and June installments of $100 each. He goes into the Army as a private about July 1.

Now, suppose that the tax on his civilian income during 1943 up to the time he goes into the Army figures out to $100.

His 1942 tax is wiped out. His 1943 tax will be increased by 25 per cent, so that his final 1943 tax obligation will be $125.

But he already has paid $200—in his March and June installments. So he'll have overpaid by $75, and can apply for a refund next March.

Or, take the case of a man making a salary of anywhere up to $15,000 in 1942 who entered the Army as, say, a private about Jan. 1, 1943. His 1943 Army pay won't be taxed. His 1942 tax will be canceled. He'll be entitled to a refund of payments on his 1942 tax made in March and June of this year.

The new law also cancels any taxes owed by a person who dies while in active service. This provision goes back to Dec. 7, 1941, and calls for refund of such taxes to heirs who paid them.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, June 29

AN EXCITING and memorable day is forecast, with decisive and determined action, even if the conventional order and accepted ways and means have to be thrown into the discard. Now, even revolutionary ideas, fresh techniques, systems and methods, may attract support from competent sources. While the new and audacious may succeed there should be no neglect of old and established responsibilities or associates. Shun erratic impulses and overtension and use finesse.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of dynamic adventures and dramatic denouements, in both business and intimate life. Projects, plans, ideas and programs of major significance may attain prodigious results, even though the methods, inspiration and tactics exceed the bounds of the regulation and orthodox. There may be a premium on the original, exceptional skilled, and spectacular performance, which may attract the approbation and support of those in high places.

A child born on this day should be endowed with many creative faculties, skills, ingenuity and originality, with audacity and adventure to put over bold projects, although it will be sensitive, high tensioned, imaginative, but sound and faithful in its established ideals and obligations.

The light of nature, the light of science, and the light of reason, are but as darkness, compared with the divine light which shines only from the word of God.—John R. Lord.

TO: Every American on a Payroll
FROM: The Secretary of the Treasury

SUBJECT: The New Pay-As-You-Go Method of Collecting Your Income Tax

Starting July 1st, both your Income and Victory Tax will be collected by an entirely new and more convenient method.

Under the old system, you were obliged every March 15th to pay either the full tax for the previous year, or a quarter of that amount. Under the new system, you will keep paid up from month to month.

After July 1st, your employer is obliged by the new law to withhold every month a part of your wages and turn the money into the United States Treasury as payment on your Income and Victory Tax.

Of course, the amount that your employer withholds will depend upon your pay and your exemptions. But this is the important point: For most of us, the amount withheld over a year's period will add up to the same that we're paying now—plus or minus a few dollars.

At the end of the year, we may owe the Government a few dollars or the Government may owe us. (See the tables below.)

You may have heard 20% mentioned as the proportion of your wages that will be withheld. Actually, this is incorrect. To figure the amount that will be withheld, take your total wages and subtract your allowance for exemptions and allowance for dependents; 20% of this lesser amount is the total that will be withheld.

Now please remember this: You must claim those exemptions to take advantage of them. Before July 1st, you must file with your employer an Exemption Certificate. If you do not do this, your employer will have no choice but to deduct 20% of your full pay check.

Here is how the new tax collection method will work: Let's say you are a working man earning $3,000 a year; that you are married, and have two children.

First of all, as a married man you are allowed a personal withholding exemption of $1,248, plus an exemption of $312 for each dependent (other than your wife). This makes a total exemption of $1,872 ($1,248 for yourself and wife, plus $624 for your two dependents), which is deducted from the $3,000 you earn before your tax is computed. You are thus paying tax on $1,128, of which your employer will withhold 20%, or $225.60 for the year. Therefore, in your pay envelope, after July 1, you will receive about $4.40 less each week.

In March, 1944, when you ordinarily would be faced with paying taxes on your 1943 income, you will file a return showing how much you have already paid, and how much your total tax actually amounted to. If, by that time, you have already paid more than your actual tax due, you will be given credit for the difference. If you owe more than you have paid, you will pay the difference.

Since this plan starts July 1, many wonder what happens to the tax payments they will already have made by that time—on March 15 and June 15.

For a great majority of people, here is what happens. . . . Your 1942 income tax is "forgiven" (either all, or most of it). The March and June installments which you originally paid on that 1942 income tax are credited, instead, as payments on your 1943 tax. With the result that on July 1st, with the year half gone, you have already paid tax on that half-year's income. In short, you are "paying as you go."

There is one thing more. Since this pay-as-you-go method leaves you just as much of your net income as you had before, you will probably find it possible to at least maintain your present rate of buying War Bonds. Do this by all means!

Taxes alone will not bring to the Treasury nearly enough money to finance the great invasion war that lies ahead. The war needs every cent of your money that does not go for the necessities of life.

Henry Morgenthau Jr.

Who's a Dirty Isolationist?

GOV. JOHN W. BRICKER probably is not going far in the attempt to hurt the motives of those calling him, for their obvious purposes, a first rate if not a dirty isolationist—or something to that effect.

In other words, no matter what Gov. Bricker may say to the contrary, such as his interview declaring himself all-out for United States participation in a post-war organization to preserve peace, he probably can't stop the smear of isolationism being conducted at his expense by persons determined to handicap him as a presidential possibility.

He understands what is going on and went so far as to explain on one public occasion that "isolation" is a word that means no more than "internationalist," which is sound judgment but not sound politics. Obviously, neither is subject to exact definition, yet it can't be denied that "isolation" is a "bad" word, while "internationalism" is a "good" word. Therefore, all aspiring politicians now must be "internationalists."

Offhand, it's impossible to think of anyone in the public eye at the moment who admits to being an "isolationist." Politicians would just as soon admit they had a weakness for robbing the public treasury. Everybody who is anybody wants to be identified as an "internationalist." It's as popular as Vitamin B complex, which it strongly resembles in some of its complexities.

There's really no issue about it any more. Everybody belongs to the same church now, and things should settle down to a straight basis of brotherly love and harmony, unless the "internationalists" start bickering among themselves about which ones are entitled to sit in the front pews and which ones should be put back of the pillars. That will probably be the next big development in the battle of name-calling.

Voice from the Wilderness

FORGOTTEN men in the government's struggle to rise above the personal influence of John L. Lewis, labor czar in the coal industry, are the dispossessed owners. They are the unidentified figures dimly seen in the background of pictures featuring Mr. Lewis glowering over the latest development.

They are representative of employers throughout the country in the handling of labor relations under the Roosevelt administration; they are just the third parties in a labor-government deal. The real business lies between the politicians and the union leaders. Whatever they decide the employers accept.

Generally overlooked but directly significant was the mine owners' brief statement to the war labor board after Mr. Lewis had called off his strike against the government on the condition that the owners should continue to be deprived of their property. The operators recalled they had complied with all WLB directives.

"The only result now apparent," they concluded," is that we have been punished for this compliance by having our mines taken away from us. Mr. Lewis, on the other hand, has been rewarded for his defiance of government by being allowed to put miners back to work under his own restrictions, having ordered the government to keep the coal mines, using the threat that the day they are turned back to their owners the men will cease to work."

Easy Does It

DURING the transition from the pay-you-later to the pay-you-now era of income tax collection there is bound to be widespread confusion and considerable resentment. The confusion can't be helped; the resentment can.

It is literally the responsibility of every person who has grasped the necessity of spot income tax payments to explain them to the hundreds of thousands among the 45,000,000 persons affected who will be certain that something drastic is happening to them and inclined to suspect the worst.

It is not drastic to be taken out of debt, and that is all the new collection technique aims to do. After July 1, every American who owes income taxes will pay them as he earns the income on which they are due. When his income stops thereafter, for any reason whatever, he will be current in his obligation to the United States treasury; there will be no unpaid debt, except in the case of taxpayers who must make token on the basis of their 1942 income to satisfy the political requirements of the New Deal.

Inevitably, the uniformed and misinformed will jump to the conclusion that something is being put over on them during the next week or 10 days, but easy does it. Once they have grown accustomed to paying cash for what they have been putting on the cuff, they'll like it.

So They Say

It is often supposed the defeat of Japan will take a long time. I believe that the interval between the defeat of Hitler and the defeat of Japan can be made short, if indeed there will be any interval at all.—Australian Foreign Minister Herbert Evatt.

By the end of the summer, the USAAF will be carrying its full share of the bombing offensive with the RAF.—Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, U. S. air chief for Europe.

News Behind the News

WLB Dispute with Ickes and Lewis Over Coal Strike Likely To Be Board's Final Blow.

By PAUL MALLON

[illegible]

The idea of making [illegible] of people of the country subject to [illegible] by a few union leaders [illegible] get at it, but a political approach. It looks like another of those attempts, without proposals to avoid direct action against the source of trouble, in favor of a few shove words and [illegible] action against all of the people for the sake of a few.

Most of the coal operators seemed to want to settle with Lewis without waiting four-and-a-half months for the outcome of these Ickes-Lewis political ramifications. Their actions support they may be stalled on this count.

In the first place, if Lewis runs in court for portal to portal pay and gets a judgment, he might be able to collect back wages for five years to 1938. A settlement would not go back so far.

On the Verge

In the second place, Ickes is running their industry and such an aggressive political character is apt to look under all their beds for whatever he can find now that he is in charge of their household.

The war labor board has been on the verge of going either out of town or on the rocks several times lately, but, at the moment, seems sharply divided as to its future course.

Some board members want to drop the whole Lewis coal strike proposition and get some sleep for the next few months. They were heartened by the fact that the President mentioned them in his draft message to congress, a reference which they interpreted as soothing their wounded prestige.

Other members want to make Lewis sign the two-year contract which they told him he must sign. They even want to force the president to force Lewis to sign the contract. This latter group is not likely to get anywhere either at the White House or with Lewis.

The matter, therefore, will probably drift. But it is at least an even money bet that the war labor board will not be around here October 31.

Talent in Strange Places

Survey Turns Up Skill for Work in War Plants.

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In an effort to tap the last great labor reservoir in the country, the women's bureau of the department of labor has just finished an amazing and amusing survey.

Seeking to find what peacetime pursuits, hobbies and household duties basically equipped women for work on the victory lines, the bureau really made some discoveries.

For example, if you have ever sewed on buttons or made button holes with your sewing machine, you are practically a spot welder. Any operator of an electric sewing machine is in fair way to become a parachute maker.

Those women who have fine embroidery or tinkered away at making their own jewelry or worked in costume jewelry factories can assemble time fuses, radio tubes and the delicate control instruments used on airplanes and submarines with hardly more than a refresher course.

Any lady of the house or kitchen maid who has polished silver on an electric buffer can find a place on a score of assembly lines—the job is called burring.

THE bureau found that this nation of household gadgeteers and hobbyists have been equipping the female of the species for years to step right onto assembly lines and in many instances master the stint much faster than their husbands ever could.

Back of that is perhaps the reason why women, barred by masculine prejudice from most factory jobs when war broke out, have literally set the male sneerers back on their heels with the speed with which they have become highly proficient in all industries from light to heavy.

A woman may have to be mechanically minded to run a lathe or milling machine, but any one who has done a fair job at sorting dried beans or berries can inspect and sort small munitions parts and some of the best women inspectors today had no more preliminary education than a reputation for keeping their houses spotlessly clean.

ONE amusing find that the bureau made is that women who meticulously follow recipes in cooking, measuring out ingredients to the last fraction, make the most proficient shell loaders.

There are many women who run their sheets through electric mangles on wash-Mondays. It's only slightly different from operating a "blueprint" machine and there isn't an instrument of war that doesn't require thousands of blueprints.

Through the U. S. employment bureaus, which do the hiring, dislocation and make arrangement for free training school attendance, the Women's Bureau is really driving hard to replace the 12,000 men a day pouring into the armed services.

Their "aptitude survey" promises to be a big stride toward answering that question often asked by housewives and female hobbyists: "But what could I do?"

If you've never done more than roll a baby carriage in the park, you can push parts and tool bins around a factory. It's as simple as that.

"THIS government believes that the press must help the government. To that end, criticism may sometimes be necessary, but the criticism must never be of a kind which can discredit the reich government. The government now foresees the time when the press, through the activity of the new ministry for public enlightenment and propaganda will develop into a piano on which it can play."—Dr. Joseph Goebbels.

THE club-footed, evil little doctor of philosophy who controls the thoughts and opinions of 80,000,000 people living in the darkness of Naziland frankly admits the influence of the newspaper. On the piano of a once-proud German press he has played, with cynical skill, the evil music that has lulled into apathy the minds of the German people, transforming them from thinking people into automatons who goosestep and shout "heil Hitler" at the bidding of their Nazi masters.

Dr. Goebbels is well aware of the achievements of the newspaper in public service. He knows that a dictatorship and a free press cannot exist together. The press functions in Naziland, and in all totalitarian countries. It contributes a public service; only it is a preverted public service in which the public is not the people, but the masters of the people. What had been the shield of the people has become the sword of the state, wielded to keep the masters of the people in power.

The tragic prostitution of the press in a dictatorship is negative proof of its value in a democracy. From it the steps to a positive proof are clear and unmistakable. If the press is a powerful weapon against the people, it is an even more powerful weapon for the people. If it contributes what may be called an anti-public service in a dictatorship, it contributes a real public service in a democracy. And the greater a danger in which a free people find themselves, the greater is the service of the press.

THE present war is a total war. That means it is a people's war. It is the people who are sacrificing in it, fighting in it, dying in it. They must also have a voice in it, and the only voice they have is that of the press, and they hear themselves through the press. The inarticulate voices of millions of individual Americans are welded by the newspapers into one voice which is heard by each individual, a voice which tells him why he is sacrificing, why he is fighting, why he is dying. And unless he knows, his heart will not be in the fight and he will go down to defeat.

The people of a totalitarian state live in a false world of lies and half-truths. The information they do get is given to them for the political and military purposes of the state, and consists of large portions of propaganda mixed with a little truth to make it palatable. No dictator dares to let all the truth be known to his wretched people, because it would light up the darkness of the false world in which they live. With the light of truth would come disaster for the dictator and his state. In the long run it is against human nature to fight for falsehood.

By contrast, democratic society, in peace or in war, depends for its existence on a search for the truth. It struggles mightily to see the world steadily and to see it whole. If that world is threatened by the holocaust of war, the people, because it is their world and their war, want to know how it is threatened, how the threat can be met, and what measures are being taken to meet it. They do not want to fight as through a glass, darkly. They want to know the truth, at least enough of it to lay at rest their fears and doubts and worries. They want the truth to light the road to victory.

TRUE, it is the function of the government to run the war and carry it to a successful conclusion. But it must never be forgotten that in a democracy the government does not exist for itself, but for the people. It controls the people, but the control has been delegated by them, and they have every right to expect that it be exercised for their welfare. The government may know best, but the people have the right to know why it is best, and they also have the right to influence the choice of what is best. The people must have some means of exerting influence on the government, and such influence depends on information about the activities of the government. During a war, as the government broadens its control, accurate information for the people becomes increasingly important for the public welfare.

The press keeps the people informed by reporting the news. In a democracy, what you don't know will destroy you. Accurate information through the columns of the newspapers serves to prevent the government from drifting too far from the people it is supposed to serve. Public opinion must be behind any activity of the government, especially during a war.

The public service that a press contributes in giving information through reporting the news is directly concerned with another service, that of explanation or clarification. Mere information is not enough for the reader. He cannot digest all types

This Week in the Sky

(Prepared especially for this page by the Hayden Planetarium of the American Museum of Natural History, New York City.)

* * *

It may be worthwhile to look ahead to the new month which begins during this week, on Thursday, to see what we may anticipate in the way of celestial fare during this time.

The sun reached its greatest northern declination last week, on Tuesday, the 22nd, and will now climb steadily down the sky until December 22nd when it reaches the winter solstice. With the decreasing declination of the sun, the days gradually shorten in length.

During July the little planet Mercury is too close to the sun to be favorably placed for observation at any time.

Glorious Venus continues throughout the month to increase in brightness reaching the very climax of its beauty on the last day of July. It is high above the western horizon at sunset.

Mars is steadily coming closer to the earth during the month and its brightness will become noticeably greater as the days pass. By the middle of the month it will be rising about midnight.

Jupiter will be visible all month in the evening sky, moving closer constantly to the sun.

Saturn is becoming visible as a morning star in the north-east.

"Well, it has a low neck-line, raglan style wings, lowered waistline with nipped-in bodice and sharply flared tail!"

Sharp Trading

Requests for Families To Take Financial Responsibility for Disabled Veterans a Bad Omen.

By DAMON RUNYON

NOT LONG ago a member of Navy Post [illegible] American Legion of New York City [illegible] inform the war department that they [illegible] like to see a number of repatriated [illegible] from North Africa and a [illegible] the members of the post feel [illegible] the family should be finan[illegible] when the man is released to a [illegible] institution.

I am told this is a common practice of [illegible] departments and yet it seems to me [illegible] that when a family wants a [illegible] man home, that man is the responsibility [illegible] the government until he has recovered. [illegible] he is beyond recovery, he should be a ward [illegible] the government until death and there should never be the slightest question of finance [illegible] responsibility on the part of the family.

In the June issue of Port O' Call, Navy Post [illegible] city's publication, there is a warning [illegible] on the incident I have mentioned. Navy Post [illegible] this post to sign any release for any man discharged from active service for wounds or disease, because if the subject suggests that [illegible] may be safe [illegible] to care for a relative he may be saving [illegible] that expense for years and the [illegible] may have to fight later to have the invalid [illegible] off the signer's hands.

NAVY POST takes the stand on the [illegible] that the government has some of the finest hospitals in the land for treatment of the [illegible] seriously incapacitated. These institutions are set up to embrace the best of the state and private medical elements. Members of the post feel that responsibility is so definitely the government's that the process of receiving the patient with [illegible] the appeal to his relatives should be automatic.

In their first grief over the sad news of a [illegible] being incapacitated it is only natural [illegible] for a family to offer to assume care of [illegible] aid, even though they may not actually [illegible] the means of so doing. It is all right [illegible] when the family income is ample and steady, but for the average family of these days a disabled man can soon become a heavy financial burden.

I share the view of Navy Post 16 that the Army should not discharge a man who has been wounded or mentally incapacitated [illegible] to service in the South Pacific, North Africa or anywhere else. I suppose the Army excuses in cases of this kind will be that the man asked for his discharge, but as Port O' Call suggests, being mentally incapacitated, he would. The man should have nothing to say about the matter until he has completely recovered.

IF YOUR reaction to the practice described is that it savors of sharp trading on the part of the Army, you are quite right. Yet you cannot blame the Army as much as the system that fosters the practice. It is a government system. It is the same system that has committed injustices against our old soldiers in all our wars.

If you think that things will be any different for the soldiers of this war, kindly mention to me one single item of definite national legislation that has been enacted in their make-behalf since the beginning of the war aside all the glowing promises made to them by the administration. Everything is for the soldiers now, to be sure. But after the war it will be nothing for them, unless we get the legislation before the war is over.

Thousands of men who had to leave good jobs when called by the Army have already been discharged, for one reason or another, and they seem to be strictly on their own as far as the government is concerned, though many of them might have been utilized in desk work and other non-combatant duties.

SOME tell me that while they have no great difficulty finding employment under present conditions, my dark forebodings about the early bright promises of old jobs to returning soldiers were well founded. The discharged men found that old jobs had been filled by others, which is the tipoff of the situation that will confront the millions of veterans who will be along later.

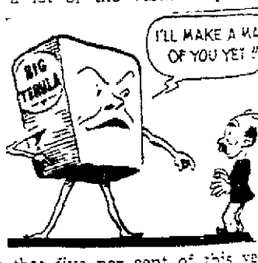
New Yeast Full of Protein

By H. W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK—A new kind of yeast with a slightly meaty flavor has been developed by the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, Teddington, England.

It is quite literally both yeast and meat, it is, it contains a lot of the valuable protein which ordinarily come from meat. The new yeast is designed for use in milk soups, stews and baked products.



Monthly Science News, a British publication, states that five per cent of this yeast added to a two-pound loaf of bread would increase the nutritive value as much as the addition of a quarter-pound beefsteak, or two eggs.

The source of the meaty yeast is a bacterium Terula utilis. The Teddington people produced a new variety of this bacterium, double the size of the original Terula.

This big germ, placed in waste molasses to which nitrogen is added in the form of ammonium salts, produces yeast in extra large quantities. The product is extremely rich in the vitamins and when dry, 50 per cent of its weight is protein. Many nutritionists claim that meat proteins are superior to vegetable proteins for man. The big Terula produces the animal.

Before we left Iran for the So-viet Union, I had made up my own mind about the answers to some of the most immediate and pressing questions I had asked myself about the Middle East.

In the first place, I was con-vinced that all these peoples were more on our side than against us.

In the second place, I was con-vinced that some sort of yeast was at work in nearly all the places I visited.

Even the strictest kind of neu-trality cannot keep the war from affecting its profound and violent changes on all the peoples who live in this region. Their lives will change more in the next ten years than they have in the last ten centuries.

Wendell Willkie interviewed many leaders in order to formulate his ideas of the Middle East and other parts of the world he visited. Among the many representatives of the conflicting factions of Jews and Arabs interviewed by Willkie was Awni Bey Abdul Hadi, Arab lawyer and nationalist leader who claims Palestine for the Arabs. After talking with him Willkie "felt a great temptation to conclude that the only solution of this problem must be as drastic as Solomon's."

Chapter Two

Everywhere I went in the Middle East I found a kind of technological backwardness along with poverty and squalor.

Four things, it seemed to me, these peoples need, in varying degree and in different ways.

They need more education. They need more public-health work. They need more modern industry. And they need more of the social dignity and self-confidence which come from freedom and self-rule.

I shall, however, never forget my visit with Gen. Charles DeGaulle.

I was met at the airport at Beirut (Syria), received by an elaborately uniformed color guard and band, and whisked several miles to the house where the general was living.

Frequently the general, in describing his struggle of the moment with the British as to whether he or they should dominate Syria and the Lebanon, would declare dramatically, "I cannot sacrifice or compromise my principles."

Fighting French

"Like Joan of Arc," he said added.

When I referred to my great interest in the Fighting French movement, he corrected me sharply.

"The Fighting French are not a movement. The Fighting French are France itself. We are the residuary legatees of all of France and its possessions."

* * * * * * * *

One's feeling that the Middle East is stirring and changing finds conviction in Turkey. For the republic of Turkey has in one generation offered a possible prototype for what is happening to all the vast area that used to be the Ottoman empire.

In spite of being young, and comparatively weak, and small, Turkey looked good to me. It looked good because it was quite clearly determined to defend its neutrality with every resource at its command.

It looked good because it had set its face toward the modern world and was building, hard and fast.

It looked good because I saw a great many tough and honest faces, some in uniform and some not, on people who quite obviously had a future to fight for.

Finally, it looked good to me because I thought I saw, in Turkey, a nation which had found itself—a sign that the ideas of increasing health, education, freedom and democracy are as valid in the oldest portions of the world as they are in the newest.

Industry

I saw as much of Turkish industry as I could in a short stay.

I saw airfields and mechanized army equipment, and railroads, and the most advanced type of building construction.

I saw all of these and more, and I convinced myself again that the industrial revolution is not the monopoly of any one nation or of any one race.

The combustion engine has awakened millions of people in the Middle East—awakened and disturbed them.

To these Turks, it has already bought new skills and new hungers.

Now that they want the modern world, and have begun to learn how to handle its tools, it is going to be very hard to stop them.

Even more impressive than the industrial and economic reconstruction of Turkey, going on in the middle of the war, is the social and educational revolution which has taken place.

In Turkey every official proudly and exclusively wears western dress. The fez has been legally abolished as one of the symbols of the change. The few veiled women one encounters already seem an anachronism.

Under the leadership of Ataturk and the determined, capable men who succeeded him, the Turks have literally and figuratively abolished the veils of the ancient east.

The Light

They have stripped them from the faces of their people and the light that has replaced them is there, one feels, to stay.

And this revolution in age-old custom was brought about without badges or uniforms or mass hysteria. It was achieved without attacking any other country.

Besides seeing Turkey's soldiers, I talked at very considerable length to the leaders of the country's government, the men who were watching Europe with the fearful anxiety of men who did not know when, or even if, they were going to be plunged into a war to save their country.

That is a terrible anxiety to live under. But not a single man in Turkey gave me the slightest hint that there would be anything other than bitter, determined, savage resistance to any threat which jeopardized their peace and safety.

The Turks would like to deal with us. They are prepared to trade goods. They produce, in Turkey, nearly one quarter of the world's supply of chrome. Their tobacco and their cotton are badly needed by other countries.

The Turks are our friends. They both like and admire us.

They do not fear us, nor do they envy us.

Their neutrality, however, is honestly administered. They refused, for example, to allow me to come to their country in the United States Army plane which took me around the world, and I had to change at Cairo into a Pan-American Airways plane.

But underneath this neutral correctness, there was a cordiality no one could mistake. When the Axis radio during my visit complained of my presence in Turkey, I told the newspaper men that the answer was simple: "Invite Hitler to send to Turkey, as a representative of Germany, his opposition candidate."

The remark, I found afterward, caused much quiet amusement among Turkish government officials.

In the last war, Turkey was on the German side. The Ottoman empire, out of the ruins of which this new republic grew, was popular nowhere in the world. Even the word "Turk" was an evil word.

Phenomenal

The change has been so quick that many of us have missed it. For something less than two decades the phenomenal struggle of Ataturk and his friends has channeled the energies and ambitions of their people into new ways of living.

Like the Arabs of the Middle East, like the peoples who live around the borders of China or on the islands of the southwest Pacific, like the Indians, they had no experience with self-government until a generation ago.

They had almost no education, wretched standards of public health and sanitation, and a long history of exploitation and poverty and misery.

In a few brief years they have completely transformed their habits of life, their ancient customs and their ways of thinking.

ESSAY

of information; some must be digested for him, and that's the job of the newspaper. It is not merely a war of men and machines, but also a war of ideas in the minds of men, and these ideas motivate the men and machines.

It is a terrible responsibility that the press has, and the press is well aware of that responsibility. Today, while the war is being fought, hundreds of newspapers, at the risk of being called "armchair strategists," are telling the reader how it is being fought, why it is being fought, and what defeat or victory means to him. The press has performed its two traditional services of reporting the news and explaining it, although faced with mounting costs, priorities, rapidly increasing wages, decreased personnel, decreased revenue.

BUT the achievements of the newspaper go beyond that of reporting the news and explaining it. If the press is the voice of the people, it stands to reason that the voice must at times be raised in warning or admonition. This the press has done, without fear or favor. The criticism has been aimed at the government, as the servants of the people, or at the people themselves, for being over-indulgent masters, or for that matter, for being capricious masters. The service of criticism is and has always been one of the most important services of the press, and in time of war it is even more important than in a time of peace.

Newspapers have been the most potent force in the uplifting of national morale. They have, through their function of initiative, inspired the people to get solidly behind war projects that seemed doomed to dismal failure. They have unified the people in a way that the government has not succeeded in doing. Two outstanding achievements which may be cited as examples are the nationwide scrap drive and the sale of War Stamps by newspaper carrier boys.

Newspapers have been vigilant against saboteurs; they have campaigned against subversive groups like the bunds in Chicago and New York; they have practiced and urged conservation; they have fought against hoarding; they have educated the people in civilian defense. They have contributed gladly, not only news and criticism, but precious advertising space which amounted to nearly $100,000,000 in the war's first year.

"SHARE-STEEL" DRIVE LAUNCHED BY WPB

Manufacturers To Be Asked To Order Only Actual Needs.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., June 28—Cooperation of more than 500 manufacturers in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania is being sought by the regional war production board in an effort to improve third and fourth quarter steel production, J. R. Fleek, WPB's deputy regional director, said today.

The "share the steel campaign," Fleek said, is part of a nation-wide drive embracing more than 2,000 manufacturer-consumers of steel, and is designed to obtain 1,000,000 tons of new steel for each of the third and fourth quarters in 1943.

WPB steel division officials will visit steel consuming centers in the four-state region to see if steel supplies on hand will permit the elimination or deferment of third and fourth quarter orders on producer's books without interfering with authorized schedules.

This is a completely co-operative movement," he added, "and we are sure industry will co-operate. Allotment requests for the third and fourth quarters from claimant agencies total about 28,000,000 tons of carbon and alloy steel, against an estimated supply of 16,250,000 tons.

"Therefore, effort is being made to see that every possible ton of steel is produced during the third and fourth quarters. In addition, an organized campaign is being conducted to obtain cooperation of the larger steel consumers in reducing their third and fourth quarter orders in the books of producers."

BEFORE a fireplace banked with white roses and blue and baskets of white gladioli and roses in seven candelabra on either side Miss Peggy Jane Reese, daughter of Mr. W. H. Reese of Columbus became the bride of Lt. John L. Ramer, son of Harry L. Ramer of 337 Hoge avenue yesterday at 2:30 p. m.

The ceremony took place in the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Reese of Weaston. Rev. Ralph Sayer-Hawley, pastor of the Weaston Presbyterian church, read the ceremony in the presence of 50 relatives and close friends.

During the ceremony several nuptial selections were played at the piano by Miss Jane Scott of Cleveland, a close friend of the bride. The couple were met by Brownie Reese, a nephew of the bride.

The couple were attended by Miss Eleanor Reese, the bride's sister, and Miss Secrist of Marion. Miss Reese was given in marriage by her brother, Harry B. Reese.

For the wedding, Miss Reese chose a light blue chiffon, street length dress with which she wore an orchid. Her attendant was attired in a grey chiffon dress and wore a corsage of gardenias and pink roses.

Close friends of the bride's family served refreshments at the reception held in the garden following the ceremony. A tiered wedding cake centered the table. When the couple left for Ft. Plan A Stay-At-Home Fourth of July

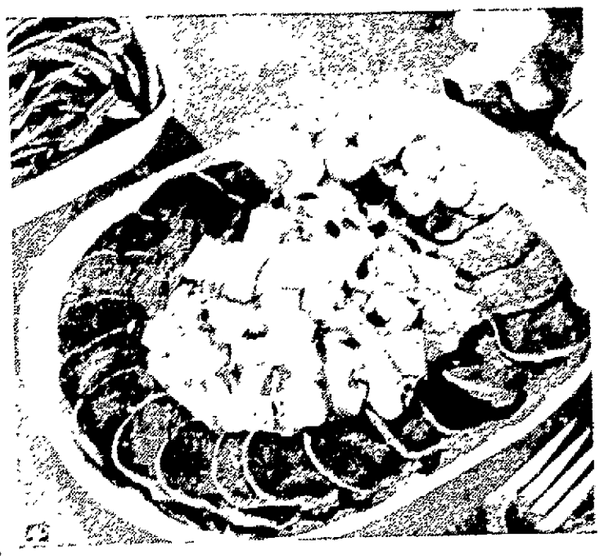
By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Food Editor



BACK YARD PICNIC: Tongue and potato salad.

That picture of a picnic and food stealing scene for a get a camp in the country or desert canyon and cooks for the Fourth of July picnic back yard is definitely not for the duration.

With a backyard picnic in mind for the family, the homemaker can plan a picnic that carries on any fun she wishes to furnish or a regular meal whipped out into the yard from the prompt hot food on the kitchen table and all hands will gladly help with the transport of it.

Get out the usual picnic service equipment if you like. Paper napkins are not rationed and no save a lot of laundering.

Food cooked and carried out in a covered casserole keeps warm longer. Even top-of-stove cooked foods can be piled into a casserole, covered and given a 10-minute oven heating before going to the picnic table.

I have designed some special recipes for outdoor serving, with ration points, budget and nutrition standards in mind.

From Victory Garden

The Victory garden may contribute to this recipe for Salisbury Meat and Vegetable en Casserole. It makes a little meat go a long way. To serve 5 or 6, make up 3½ cups of well seasoned regular white sauce, add 1 cup each cooked carrots, green beans and diced cooked celery, ¼ cup chopped onions, 2 tablespoons each of chopped green peppers and minced parsley, 1/3 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika. Pour into buttered, shallow casserole. Cover with the meat cakes, made like this:

Mix together 1 pound hamburg or ground boneless veal, pork or beef, 1 cup boiled rice, 1 egg or 2 yolks, ¼ cup cream, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon paprika and 1 tablespoon catsup. Shape into cakes about 1½ inches in diameter and ½ inch thick. Sprinkle with flour and brush with melted bacon fat. Arrange on top the vegetables. Cover and bake 30 minutes in moderate oven. Uncover and bake 5 minutes to brown the top. With this serve a relish cabbage salad, hot biscuits and honey, with melon or fresh berries and cookies for dessert.

Garden style macaroni and cheese gives a filling main dish with plenty of zip and few ration points. Make up 3 cups of white sauce. Stir constantly while cooking add 2 3 cup sliced cheese, 1 3 cup diced yet celery and 2 tablespoons minced onions. Cook slowly until cheese has melted. Add 3 cups cooked macaroni and pour into 1½ cups cooked asparagus and 3 hard-cooked eggs, sprinkled with ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika, and arranged in a buttered, shallow baking dish. Cover with 2 3 cup buttered crumbs and bake 35 minutes—or until brown—in a moderate oven.

Tossed green salad or sliced tomato and avocado team with this main dish. Warm hard rolls or muffins and jam or jelly you have on hand, substantial main course. For dessert, fresh fruit with angel food cake or blueberry roll is "tops."

Creole fish steak with escalloped new potatoes and a green salad, whole wheat rolls and a jelled or frozen dessert (kept in refrigerator until time for serving) is another summer dinner menu with picnic possibilities.

Cold potato salad and broiled split "franks" buttered buns, crisp radishes and sliced tomatoes give a menu economical and quick to prepare. Fresh apple or peach pie will make a banner dessert.

You might like to split the franks halfway through, insert pickle relish and then bake until brown in a shallow pan, well greased. Stuffed tomatoes with salad dressing make a wholesome salad fitting for this low cost meal. Plan a dessert rather on the heavy side, such as deep dish blueberry pie (warm or cold) or chocolate cream pudding.

For convenience of serving, arrange salads in lettuce cups or in small dishes so that they can be easily slipped onto the main serving plates.

in the country at slightly over 200,000, leaving more than 300,000 on the job in the nation's underground pits.

The men absent from work since June 30 refused to observe an order from the UMW policy committee June 22 to resume production with the government in full charge of the mines.

Urged to Return

President William Blizzard of District 17 sounded the keynote at Logan, W. Va., with a speech to the rank and file counselling them to "act together, be loyal to the union and go back to work together."

Spokesmen at the meeting criticized President Roosevelt, the new anti-strike legislation and the war labor board, but declared that "we are going to show our good faith."

Employes of Three Ohio Mines Still Idle

By The Associated Press

BELLAIRE, O., June 28—Employes of at least three of the state's major mines failed to join the return-to-work movement that sent a majority of Ohio's 21,000 bituminous coal diggers back into the pits today.

Adolph Pacifico, vice president of the United Mine Workers union District 6, said the following shafts, employing a total of about 2,000, were idle today: the Hanna Coal Co.'s nearby Dunglen and Willow Grove shafts and the Muskingum Coal Co.'s Jones mine near Zanesville.

Pacifico said employes of at least five of the state's shafts voted last night not to go back as directed by the UMW policy committee last week.

The district vice president left for Zanesville to confer with UMW diggers there in an attempt to get them to return.

Miners from 22 of the 24 workings in the Belmont-Jefferson-Harrison county area representing some 8,000 of the 9,000 diggers employed in the eastern Ohio fields, voted last night to end their week-long work stoppage, and Pacifico said he thought Buckeye miners generally would follow suit.

manner that the whole empire will feel its full impact in a most violent and destructive way."

Meanwhile a recess-minded congress opened full throttle today in an effort to complete legislative action this week on appropriation bills totaling $115,000,000,000.

The way was cleared for quick senate passage of the war department's $71,500,000,000 "decisive budget," which provides for nearly 100,000 new planes, and for a finish fight over house demands for liquidation of the national youth administration.

Barring unexpected complications, congressional leaders hope to start a vacation soon lasting until about the middle of September.

Destroyers Can Maneuver

...It is practically impossible for ...a single bomber to hit a fast sur...face ship, such as a destroyer or light cruiser, under such conditions. With binoculars the enemy can see bombs start their descent, and in the 45 or 50 seconds before they reach sea level he can wheel a speedy vessel about and head in the opposite direction.

Pattern bombing, similar to that used in high-level attacks on heavily defended industrial centers and shore installations, will increase the chances of scoring on ships but a destroyer might even dodge the salvoes from several planes. A battleship or heavy cruiser offers a target several times easier to hit and its loss would be a harder blow to the enemy fleet.

Transports, also less maneuverable and usually slower than warships, are prime targets for bombers. But as they are not as well defended with anti-aircraft guns as the warships, heavy bombers will leave them for the smaller planes which must attack from a shorter range.

A pattern attack upon a ship usually involves a somewhat different technique from an assault upon stationary targets such as factories or dockyards. The object is to cover all possible positions of the vessel as it maneuvers to escape. A carrier caught while receiving or discharging planes will be unable to maneuver abruptly but most surface ships under air attack will continually change course.

A frequent tactic for assaulting a maneuverable warship is to split the bomber formation into flights, converging over the target. The leading flight might drop its bombs first while the others wait momentarily for a movement of the vessel to indicate the direction of maneuver.

Many bombs must necessarily be wasted in pattern bombing of ships, but it is the best way to assure a certain number of hits from high altitudes.

Warning Sounded That Jap Phase of War Critical

While DeWitt Mackenzie is on vacation, this daily is using articles being written by Max Hill, foreign chief of The Associated Press bureau in Tokyo.

By MAX HILL

An Englishman who is in a position to speak with authority wrote a special article for The Associated Press which was published yesterday, and in which he said:

"The people (in Britain) know they can expect no joyride to Berlin or Tokyo."

The author is W. J. Haley, who is joint managing editor of the Manchester Guardian and Evening Post, and a director of Press Association of Great Britain and of Reuters.

Haley has just returned to England from an extensive trip through the South Pacific, and the menace that is Japan is no longer is a myth to him.

Let us hope it was from knowledge and not sentiment that he said:

"Churchill spoke for the nation when he pledged that Tokyo must go the way of Berlin and Rome."

Sees Need of Awakening

It is time, also, that America awakened to the critical situation in the Pacific. The status of the war in that area can be summarized in a few words, and I only hope the readers of this column won't be too shocked by the definitely ominous factors.

Our government is aware of the danger, as are the responsible heads of our armed forces. They know of the long and bitter and bloody battles which face us before the Japanese bow in defeat, as they must in the end.

But a spirit of complacency seems to permeate the attitude of the average American, especially those who live in the east and midwest.

I have been asked many times why I didn't say so while I was in Tokyo—instead of now—if Japan was so strong. Well, this is the reason. Japan didn't fool us. She wasn't strong. We were weak and with typical American confidence we looked on Japan as a push-over.

Now Japan is strong. She had a carefully planned program of attack. In 90 days she seized a rich and vast empire, and since that time she has done nothing but prepare for the inevitable attack from the United Nations to regain it.

Jap War To Be Costly

Any attempt to wrest this territory from her will be costly in both men and materials. Japan knows that. Now she can sit back and wait for a stalemate. She has accomplished her objectives in this war, even more than Hitler.

This is not to be taken as criticism of our strategy in the war. But this much is obvious. We played into the hands of the Japanese once by believing the lifeblood of that empire had been drained away by the long China affair.

Now we say, with the same confidence, that once we have Hitler out of the way we will turn on Japan and—just as easy as blowing out a candle—we will take her into camp.

Nothing fits better into the Japanese program than our policy of devoting most of our attention to the Atlantic. It gives Japan time to consolidate and exploit all of her vast oriental plunder.

Let us suppose that after Hitler is defeated that the militarists ostensibly are discredited, that a supposedly mild cabinet of businessmen takes over.

They could—and would—say blandly that they were the responsible, respectable faction in Japan, the people we could deal with in safety.

Let us not be duped by any such ruse, and the maneuver is not only likely but probable. It would mean another war in the Pacific within 20 years.

The Japanese have yet to be defeated in any war. They must be defeated this time, invaded and their militarism discredited at home as well as abroad before we can build victory in the Pacific.

Strike from mankind the principle of faith, and men would have no more history than a flock of sheep.—(Bulwer)

Artistic Marine

By The Associated Press

BUTTE, MONT.—This is the way Marvin H. Essman, 25, who recently enlisted in the Marine corps, explains his skill in embroidery. "I won a quilt at a church raffle. A friend asked me where I got it and I told him I did it all by myself. He laughed so hard I was forced to learn to do handwork to save my face." Essman, a coal miner, won third prize for his needlework exhibits at the state fair last year.

Radar Passes First Sea Tests with Flying Colors

Among the experts in the Navy's Research Laboratory in Washington working on improvements in Radar and associated radio detection projects, are: left to right, A. A. Varela, L. H. Page, C. B. Mirick and M. H. Schrenk.

Some Skippers Skeptical at First, But Quickly See Value of Eyes That Pierce Fog, Darkness.

Radar—the radio "eyes" which enable our Army and Navy to spot enemy ships and planes in fog or darkness at great distances—underwent a thorough test at sea early in 1939. Scientist Robert M. Page, who mainly developed the modern equipment, and a crew of assistants went aloft to operate the pioneer set. John M. Wight, lower takes up the story at that point in this fifth of six daily installments.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Copyright, 1943, by The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The tests began aboard the battleship New York in 1938 were crucial in the history of U. S. Naval Radar.

The reaction of practical, hard-headed line officers to the way the equipment performed appeared likely to determine its fate for some years to come.

If results were poor, the scientists knew, then the Navy's fighting men probably would not be interested in Radar for a long time to come. To win acceptance, it had to be good.

Page headed the operating crew which went out on the New York, taking with him Robert C. Guthrie, M. E. Reppert and A. A. Varela. They hardly had cleared the Virginia Capes out of Norfolk, when the fun began.

A destroyer squadron had been assigned to make a torpedo attack on the battleship under cover of darkness and Page recalls now that the night was very black indeed. From sunset on, he and his men stood by their Radar waiting to pick up the destroyers. They did not know from what direction the attack was coming. They had to keep a 360 degree lookout.

Commander Doubtful

Several hours after they went on the alert, the Atlantic squadron commander, Vice Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, showed up in the control room. He watched and watched the Radar indicator. For a time which to Page seemed endless, nothing happened. Finally the admiral lost patience. He knew the time of attack and he evidently decided the destroyers were closing in through the darkness without being discovered. He turned to go, then decided to wait a few minutes longer.

Just about that time the first signal came in.

"There it is," exclaimed the admiral, pointing to the indicator. The destroyers still were eight miles away. The effect on the admiral was electric. From that moment on he was a Radar enthusiast.

Captain (now Rear Admiral) Robert M. Griffin, skipper of the battlewagon, was similarly impressed.

"After that," Page says, "anything we wanted them to do on the New York, they would do if it was possible." The ship never encountered fog but it often ran through rain. Radar picked up everything important which was within range, including on one occasion the mountain peaks of a distant shoreline.

When the cruise ended, Admiral Johnson made a report:

"The equipment is one of the most important radio developments since the advent of radio itself."

Back in the Navy's bureau of engineering the scientists, Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen and other Navy authorities decided the time had come to develop additional Radar sets, but with the understanding that the branching out into quantity would not in any way interfere with further progress in the improvement of quality.

Private Companies Help

Two of the major electronics laboratories of the country—those operated by Bell Telephone and Radio Corporation of America—had by then been interested in radio detection work, and this meant the way was clear for commercial manufacture.

On a bid basis, the first contracts were let to RCA in October, 1939—a month after the outbreak of the war in Europe. "We sent the XAF up to their place," Dr. Taylor says, "and we told them that we wanted six Chinese copies—not a thing changed. They did a fine job."

From that time on, the bureau of engineering under Admiral Robinson, who was aided by Captain A. J. Spriggs and such enthusiasts as Commander Sam Tucker, devoted considerable effort toward increasing production.

The bureau of ships, formed in 1940 by consolidation of bureau of engineering and bureau of construction and repair, and headed by Admirals S. M. Robinson and A. H. Van Keuren, continued this work, as did Captain J. B. Dow when he succeeded Springs in charge of the bureau's radio unit.

Later the Radar business of the Navy as well as that of the Army became so great that first the Navy's own office of production and material, and later the war production board, took over coordination of orders and output.

It was about this time, too, that another government agency got into another phase of Radar work. The national defense research committee through its laboratories was asked to make and did deliver to the Navy certain important contributions to radio detection.

Shortly after the first RCA contract for the original six commercially-made Radar sets, 14 more were ordered. These first 20 went on battleships, aircraft carriers and cruisers as rapidly as they were produced. Bowen, who had most to do with interesting the private companies in Radar research and production, is especially proud of their work.

Praises Procedure

"That's the best way to do it," he said recently. "Develop the idea and produce a prototype in the laboratory and then let the other fellows make it. The private companies could not have done the Radar research through all those years. Some of their men told me their directors just wouldn't stand for the expense on a project which initially held so little chance of commercial development."

Both Bowen and Taylor say that the first Radar sets sent out to the fleet were short of ideal, but they agreed that with the increasing possibility of American involvement in the war, they had to do the best they could with what they had.

"We knew that some of the stuff would have to be junked as soon as it could be replaced," Bowen says. "But we wanted to get it installed before it might be needed. The longest chance we took was with the Navy men. If a new gadget doesn't work well, they may lose confidence in it and not use it. Naturally we did not want that to happen with Radar."

History proves he need not have worried about the Navy's reception of its new "eyes."

One of those who made many of the installations was Guthrie. He started the work in December, 1940—a year before Pearl Harbor—and spent the next six months with the Pacific fleet, equipping ships and showing officers and men how to operate the sets at sea.

"The response we got at first was rather interesting," Guthrie recalls. "Some ship's companies were very enthusiastic about Radar and some were rather cool toward it."

Serves in Fog

One of the vessels Guthrie served on was the battleship California. He boarded her at Puget Sound to go down to Mare Island, where she was to join the fleet. Just off of the Sound she ran into a thick fog. It seemed that the arrival at Mare Island would be greatly delayed since the captain was not disposed to risk harming his ship or running down somebody else. He would have to proceed at greatly reduced speed.

However, the Radar was working and the captain was greatly interested in it. Soon he noticed that every little fishing boat for miles around showed up on the indicator. They convinced him of what Radar could do for navigation in a fog. He ordered "full steam ahead" and arrived at Mare Island on time.

Another ship on which Radar was installed early was the aircraft carrier Yorktown. An RCA man handled that job and returned on the carrier to Long Beach. While they still were several hundred miles at sea all sorts of weird wave-pattern disturbances began to show up on the indicator. Neither the RAC man nor the Yorktown officers could explain—until finally they realized that Radar was "showing them the California coastal mountains."

"Mr. Guthrie did an especially splendid job in getting these early installations in the fleet and seeing that somebody knew how to operate them," Taylor said one day in Guthrie's presence.

Guthrie looked thoughtful for a moment, then grinned.

Cloud Trouble

"I had trouble on one occasion," he said. "We had put Radar on a cruiser, and the executive officer didn't think much of it. About the first day out he came to the control room to see what it could do. We picked up a flight of planes all right and then we got something else. He went outside to look off in the direction from which the signal came and there wasn't anything but a cloud.

"'You must have picked up the cloud,' the exec said.

"'No,' I said, 'this thing looks right through clouds.'

So he waited and waited for something to come out of the cloud but nothing did. Then he asked me to try to pick up several other clouds on the horizon. I tried, but got no signals, and I couldn't explain then what had happened. I'm afraid he had little faith in Radar for a while after that.

"Now, of course, we know that the cloud was ionized (surcharged with electricity). We were getting reflections like those from the ionosphere in the old days."

Johnny Rife Fires 74 To Match Mar-O-Del Par

Turns in Lowest 18-Hole Score of Season.

Johnny Rife fired an even par 74 over the Mar-O-Del public links to lead a contingent of some 70 golfers playing on the Route 23 layout yesterday.

Rife's masterful round marked the first par for 18 holes racked up at Mar-O-Del yet this season. Other low scores made at the municipal course yesterday included Cliff Willis 76, Leo Oberlander 79, Bob Graham 82, and Don Preuninger 82.

Oberlander shot the lowest nine hole score of the year at Mar-O-Del Friday evening, 33. This is four below par figures.

Harry Mounts and Marion Hinklin, co-managers of the Mar-O-Del course, are planning a blind bogey tourney for club members July 4. This event will officially open the 1943 tournament season of Mar-O-Del.

Don't Disturb

KANSAS CITY — Detectives cruising in the neighborhood, rushed to a bank with drawn revolvers when the burglar alarm clanged. They found the night watchman nonchalantly working on a crossword puzzle. "Didn't you hear the alarm?" demanded the detectives. "Sure," said the watchman. "I thought it was at the bank down the street." It wasn't a burglar, but a short circuit that caused the noise.

Four-Horse Crash Mars Final Harness Racing Card

Hugh Bell Suffers Rib Injury; Chicago Horse Hurt.

MARION'S most successful Little Grand Circuit harness racing program in many years came to an end in a session Saturday night which was marred only by a four-horse crackup in which Hugh Bell, fancy Marion pilot, suffered two broken ribs and a high-priced bay mare owned by Taxicab King Tom Hogan of Chicago was seriously injured.

The crack-up occurred in the first heat of the third race—the 2:21 class pace. While an official cause for the terrible crash could not be obtained, it was understood that the crackup resulted when one driver, making a bid for the lead, cut in too sharply on the then-leading horse.

The first horse to topple over was Sandy D, owned and driven by Harry Short of Washington C. H. Mr. Hogan's Volo Elworthy, piloted by Whitey Dennison of Rochester, N. Y., was next. Nan Abbe, driven by Clint Hodgins of Shelbyville, Ind., was next and Vince Abbe, being handled by Bell, was last. All but four of the eight starters figured in the collision.

Hodgins, winner of 12 races in the final week of the three-week stand, finished at the top of Little Grand Circuit drivers with 19 victories. Gabe Cartnal of Hanover ended in second place with 17 and Hugh Bell was third with 16.

The pari-mutuels grossed enough Saturday night to send the take total for the meeting to well over $160,000, betting officials reported.

Pinch-hitting for Steve Phillips, who was called to Toledo where he will serve as judge for the running meet which opens there this week, was Harvey H. Hartman of Quakertown, Pa. Hartman has started each of the last Marion county fair racing programs.

Saturday night's feature event—the free-for-all pace—was won by F. R. G., owned by Leo Gottschalk of Milwaukee, Wis., and driven by Hodgins. The Indiana pilot scored first in each of the last two heats while Bob Plaxico of Canton wound up in first place in the initial mile with Hi Pat, a Michigan-owned horse. Both horses are trained by Plaxico.

Blacksmith Jack Reynolds of Pinehurst, N. C., again saw his fleet-footed Millie Aubrey scored first in winning each heat of the 2:18 class trot. The third and final race, the 2:21 class pace, was won by Secret Mission, owned by Cleo A. Young of Timmonsville, S. C., and driven by Carl Hutchell.

TWO-TEAM "LEAGUE" TO OPEN SEASON

Coca-Cola and Waldo Dodgers To Clash Thursday.

Coca-Cola and the Waldo Dodgers will officially open the 1943 Commercial league softball season at Garfield park Thursday night. Although both teams have been playing softball for a month, this contest will be the first Commercial circuit game for both of them.

Coke and the Dodgers, in fact, are the only Commercial teams in city softball this year. Both have played several tilts with Industrial league squads in what are tabbed "Industrial-Commercial no-count games" by the softball commission. Yet, these games have not been played only for satisfying the great love of the game held by most softballers for they will be figured along with loop games in selections for teams to play in the Little World Series at the end of the season in September.

In past years, the Commercial league has always had at least six teams. This year, because of the dearth of players, only two Commercial loop teams could be mustered by the softball commission.

Waldo and Coke will meet each other only twice during the 1943 season, once in the first round and once in the second. The second round for the Industrial-Commercial league starts Thursday, July 8.

On the basis of records so far this year, Coca-Cola is considered as pre-game favorite. The soft-drink team, which took the Commercial league title last year, has three wins and two defeats while Waldo has no victories as against three setbacks.

PIRATES SEEK WIN FROM REDS AFTER LOSING TWIN BILL

Cincinnati Takes First Sunday Double Header Since Last September.

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, June 28—The Pittsburgh Pirates will attempt to avenge a double lacing handed them yesterday by the Cincinnati Reds as they take the Redlegs out under the lights tonight in the Smoky City.

Manager Frankie Frisch nominated Truett (Rip) Sewell to do the hurling for the Bucs while Bucky Walters will oppose him.

Yesterday's twin killing in Cincinnati marked the first time since Sept. 12, 1942, the Reds have been able to make a double notch in the win column on a Sunday bill.

Elmer Riddle bagged his eighth triumph of the season in the opener when he set the Pirates down 6 to 3, and Ray Starr got credit for the 5 to 1 nightcap although he voluntarily went to the showers at the end of seven innings because of the heat. Joe Beggs relieved him and pitched one-hit ball for the remainder of the contest.

Bob Elliott, Pirate third baseman, helped the Redleg cause in the third inning of the first game by making two miscues, which tied up with a couple of base knocks, accounted for four Red runs.

Riddle was in hot water twice. In the first inning he loaded the bases with two out but he struck out catcher Al Lopez. He filled the bases again in the third inning, with one out, but he again threw three strikes past Lopez and made Vince DiMaggio fly out.

Marion and Waldo Teams Split Honors in Doubleheader Here

The Waldo Dodgers handed the Lords Jewelry softball team its first loss of the season in an upset victory at Garfield park yesterday afternoon, 5 to 4. In the second game of the doubleheader, the Jewelers bounced back to annex a 14 to 8 win.

The moundsman who successfully carried out the difficult assignment of beating Lords was J. Ward. He gave up six hits, the same number that Harold Millisor, Lords pitcher, allowed.

The Waldo victory seems all the more startling because the Dodgers have not won a single game in Industrial-Commercial league competition thus far this year. The jewelers, previous to yesterday' fatal twin bill curtain raiser, had won four straight games, knocking off such top-flight league outfits as Universal Cooler and Coca-Cola.

Bob Scott and John Williams each got doubles for Lords in the first encounter. Smith, Dodger player, was the only man to hit safely off Millisor more than once. He banged out two singles for his part in the Waldo offensive.

With fiery revenge in their hearts, the jewelers came back in the nightcap to trounce Waldo, 14 to 8 on a 16-hit attack. Caprino was the winning chucker for Lords. He was hit hard, giving up 10 hits.

Partlow was the star sticker for Lords in this game, getting four bingles out of four trips to the plate. Included in this grand-slam batting effort were all possible hits, a single, double, triple, and to top it off, a home run. Louis Meyers, Somerlot and Caprino each hit two baggers for Lords. Holliday and Williams cracked out a triple each.

Temple Schedules Ten Games, Plays 3 of Them

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA—Temple university has finished a weird baseball season. The Owls played only three of the scheduled 10 games, winning two of them.

The other seven games were called for about every reason in the book. West Virginia abandoned the sport, Princeton was stopped by cold, Georgetown was rained out, Penn Military College was halted by wet grounds, Penn State and Bucknell ran into snow.

TRIBE HAS BIGGEST STAFF OF PITCHERS AND NEEDS 'EM ALL

Boudreau Has Used 35 Hurlers in Last Fifteen Games.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 28—The Cleveland Indians have the largest pitching staff in the American league but Manager Lou Boudreau has needed his assortment of 12 flingers.

The Tribe pilot has employed 35 hurlers in the last 15 games and only three moundsmen—Jim Bagby, Al Smith and Chubby Dean—have gone the distance in that period.

Although the Chicago White Sox made only six hits and one in the opener of a double header at the stadium yesterday, four Tribe elbowers were used to register a 2 to 1 victory.

The Sox came back with a 2 to 0 triumph in the afterpiece cut to five innings by weather.

Jack Salveson started for Cleveland in the first tussle and allowed the Sox their only run in the third when Guy Curtright smacked a home run into the left field seats. The rookie outfielder also connected safely in the nightcap to stretch his hitting streak to 24 consecutive games.

Allie Reynolds went to the hill in the fourth and pitched four hitless innings but was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Reynolds received credit for the win—his first of the season.

The Indians are not scheduled today and tomorrow. They open a three-game series with the New York Yankees Wednesday night in a benefit game for the National War Fund, Inc.

Joe Gordon's Bat Beginning To Demand Attention Again

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The latest hospital reports indicate Joe Gordon's long-ailing bat may be about to sit up and take a little nourishment again.

The patient is still pretty weak with a hitting "temperature" of only .238 at the moment, which means no visitors and plenty of sunshine still to come. But in the last few days it's been showing that there are still signs of life. Topping off the "recovery" with four hits in the twin bill the Yankees cut up with Red Sox yesterday—including a two-run homer that won the opener for the Bombers—the Flash has chipped in with eight safe wallops in four games and pulled his average up 45 points.

No Reason for Slump

His has been one of the worst slumps in modern times, largely because there didn't seem to be any reason for it.

NOTES STEADY GAIN IN STEEL DEMAND

Magazine Says Orders Now Extend Through 3rd Quarter.

CLEVELAND, June 28—An increase in demand for steel plates has been "particularly noticeable over the past fortnight and most makers are booked solidly through the third quarter with October capacity rapidly disappearing," the magazine Steel reported today.

"Cancellations of steel orders due to cutbacks in the ordnance program appear to have run their course, few having been received for the past few days," the trade publication added. "In their stead is an expanding volume of tonnage affecting most major products."

National ingot production was unchanged last week at 98½ per cent of steel's estimated capacity. By districts, Pittsburgh climbed ½ point to 98 per cent, Cincinnati two to 95, Cleveland ½ to 95, and Detroit five to 92, while Wheeling fell 3½ points to 86½ per cent and Youngstown was unchanged at 97.

ALLIES PUT FRENCH DISPUTE ON SHELF

Eisenhower Won't Permit Disagreement To Interrupt Plans.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28—Gen. Charles De Gaulle and his adherents had unofficial but emphatic notice today that the allied commander in French Africa—charged with final preparations for an assault on axis-held Europe—will brook no interference due to French political controversies.

An exposition of Anglo-American policy and purposes made available to this writer by such informants and in such circumstances as to leave no doubt as to its authenticity makes clear that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower will be firmly supported by both governments in whatever additional steps he finds it necessary to take to secure his communication lines, avert delay in using the French African bases for aggressive action against the enemy and, above all, reduce the hazards to American, British and French forces under his command.

The allied commander took the first step when he insisted to the French committee for national liberation at Algiers that Gen. Henri Giraud must remain in complete authority over French elements of his armies and that efforts by De Gaulle to oust officers under Giraud in favor of his own adherents must come to an end.

HIGHER CEILINGS FOR FARM PRICES URGED

Latest Development in Fight Against Price Rollback.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28 — A readjustment of price ceilings to balance the purchasing power of war workers with that of farmers was proposed by Senator George (D-Ga.) today as congress moved toward final approval of legislation to choke off the administration's food price rollback program.

George told reporters he interpreted the votes of both houses last week to end this program as expressing a determination by congress to "prevent an increase of the purchasing power of industrial workers as against that of the farmers."

Administration leaders were said to be attempting, meanwhile, to seek congressional authority for direct subsidy payments to farmers, instead of to food processors.

War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and Price Administrator Prentiss Brown reportedly are urging that congress leave the way clear for direct subsidy payments to farmers in the "hold the line" fight on increasing living costs.

Australia's New Airports Boast Model Terminals

By International News Service

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA, — Major Clyde Yarnell, Minneapolis-born traffic officer for the Air Transport Command in this area, took Maj. Gen. Harold L. George at his word when the U. S. transport chief told Yarnell to make Australian ATC installations a model for the rest of the world.

With the actual operations facilities already perfected by Col. Eugene Gillespie of New York City, commander of the South and Southwest Pacific activities of Air Transport, Yarnell turned his attention to the mechanics of handling passengers.

Former U. S. Flier

His background as a World War I flyer (his Victory Medal recognizes Yarnell's participation in five major campaigns) and as an advertising executive in Minneapolis, Atlanta and New York City equipped the 44-year-old Yarnell well for the task of speeding passengers on their way with a maximum of comfort.

As his goal, he decided to build in Australia a trans-Pacific air terminus which could be favorably compared to America's most modern and which could handle as many as 200 passengers daily.

Very shortly the plans he drew for that terminus will become actuality.

Spacious Lounge Room

Occupying the entire ground floor of this city's biggest building, the new terminus — drawn along the most-streamlined pattern—will duplicate to the letter General George's order.

There will be a spacious lounge room with uniformed Australian girls dispensing refreshments from an American Red Cross canteen installed on the premises, while several of Anzacland's fairest will be on twenty-four hour duty to answer questions and to direct passengers.

A loud speaker system will announce arrivals and departures with the regularity of a commercial air line. Baggage will be handed from the receiving counter to a truck which backs right into the ATC terminus, is loaded, swung around again on a turntable, and is sent back to load the aircraft.

Bus Runs to Airport

From a model Gillespie and he designed, Yarnell will utilize a special 12-passenger bus to take travelers to and fro.

Six Air Transport officers are on constant duty in the traffic section, with Lieutenant George J. Breindel, Spokane, Wash., heading the priorities control branch and Lieutenant Oliver Truax, Martins-Ferry, Ohio, in charge of traffic operations.

And to top the perfect-service picture, travelers will read American newspapers only 72-hours old as they await passage back to America.

The secret of success in life is for a man to be ready for his opportunity when it comes.—(Disraeli)

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 28—Rollbacks in the prices of meat and butter will remain in effect until final enactment of a law against subsidies.

GREELELY, Colo. — Eureka! Folks in the courthouse believe they have discovered the world's laziest hen. She's in a flock that belongs to Mrs. Ben Ervine, who lives nearby. The hens dig worms each morn in the courthouse lawn. All but one of them go home to lay eggs. But this one chick is so lazy she lays the egg in the middle of the lawn.

SOME STOCKS HIT NEW PEAKS

News Developments Encourage Buying; Some Issues at 3-Year Highs.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 28—Investment funds continued to trickle into the stock market today with the result that rails and assorted industrials pushed up fractions to a point or more, a number to 3-year peaks.

Brokers suggested a variety of reasons for the further stiffening of trends. Among these were, the back-to-work move in the coal field, persistent war optimism, a little inflation thinking and the desire for reemployment of idle cash. Steels, aircrafts, motors, rubbers and mail orders were prominent on the swing.

Shares in the "new high" category included Chrysler, Willys-Overland, U. S. Rubber and Sears Roebuck. Numerous issues were unchanged and Phillips Petroleum was a soft spot.

Bonds were selectively improved and commodities mixed.

RYE PRICES REACH PEAKS FOR SEASON

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 28—Rye surged forward to new seasonal peaks today, gaining more than a cent at times. Oats were strong but wheat weakened as buying demand slackened because open market prices had gone above the loan level in some southeastern terminals. Hedging was noted in the wheat pit.

Expectations of heavy feeding demand, emphasized by the government's forecast of a pig crop this year of 127,000,000 head, was the main factor supporting both oats and rye. It was felt, also, that any advance in the corn ceiling would be accompanied by a price gain for competitive feed grains.

U. S. CITY "BOMBARDED" AS MUNITIONS BURN

Shells Hurtled a Mile in Blaze Near Colorado City.

By The Associated Press

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., June 28—Residents of this inland city dug jagged shrapnel from their yards and the walls of buildings today as souvenirs of a terrifying four-hour bombardment from munitions set off by a freight train fire.

At least four persons were injured yesterday by particles of high-powered shells, some of which hurtled a mile from the riding where the blazing cars were isolated by firemen.

LOST IN SINKING. When the Coast Guard cutter Escanaba was torn by an explosion of undetermined origin and sank in the Atlantic, Lieut. Comdr. Carl Uno Petersen, the skipper, went down with his ship. Only two members of the crew were rescued, Coast Guard says.

BUSY HALF HOUR was put in during a bombing raid over St. Nazaire, France, recently by Sergt. Maynard H. Smith of Cairo, Ill., who is credited with saving the lives of crewmates and his Flying Portress. While some crew members bailed out from the plane, set afire by attack, Smith applied first aid to a wounded man, helped another to escape, fought off attacking planes, using one machine gun after another. When the heat started to explode his ammunition, he beat out the fire, practically with his bare hands, and enabled the pilot to return the Portess safely to its base. This is an official U. S. HARVARD 'RETREADS' BUSINESS CHIEFS

By International News Service

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—No one is too old to learn. In fact, men between 28 and 55 years old are establishing some kind of a record for acquiring knowledge at the "retread" course for business executives at Harvard Business School.

A short time ago, a class of 111 of these mature students were given tickets of proficiency, after completing 15 weeks of the most intensive type of study.

What did they learn? A Vermont banker became so interested in war production problems that he has abandoned banking in favor of solving them for the government.

A sales manager of a gasoline pump factory has become an enthusiast in the theories of engineering.

A credit manager is planning to handle finance for a large Latin-American corporation.

The "retread" title was created to describe the development of new interests in experienced business men.

One of the students, Thomas R. Reese, former branch manager of the Commercial Investment Trust, sums up the average student's reactions to the school. Thomas plans to go to Mexico City soon to take an assistant treasuryship with the corporation.

"We have discovered," says Reese, "that anyone can get a working knowledge of such things as cost sheets, books of accounts, blue-prints, time rates and standards, and the working out of fair profits. I wouldn't have believed such progress possible when I went to college.

"You could argue that it would be a good thing, on the basis of our experience, to stay away from college until maturity."

HOOVER URGES UNIFIED ADMINISTRATION OF FOOD

Declares Consolidation of Conflicting Agencies Necessary.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 28—"If we are to end this food chaos and stop inflation of food prices," says former President Herbert Hoover, "congress should pass at once the Fulmer bill, which provides for consolidation of the conflicting agencies into an adequate food administration."

Hoover, who was World War I food administrator, said in a statement yesterday:

"Inflation in food prices cannot be stopped unless we have a single responsible head over the inseparable function of food production, distribution, prices, rations, government purchases, imports and exports."

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

THE manager of the hotel Ruth Hayes chose for the staging of the money transfer is one of the finest and most capable men I ever have met," my father went on, with more enthusiasm in his voice than he usually shows.

"Of course," he added, "I made a most careful check on him before talking to him, and I found that his loyalty to the country and his character are beyond reproach. The fact that Ruth Hayes chose his hotel almost convinces me that she will not attempt any violence against Olins, yet I shall not relax any of our precautions."

He paused, and looked around the room. "Where is Katharine?" he asked. "She ought to know about this, although she will not be present at the encounter."

"She is in the other room," I answered. "I'll get her."

Finds Katharine Calm

Katharine was sitting by the window gazing out at the panorama of towering skyscrapers and squatty old buildings which is New York. I knew what painful reflections must be hers, but her face was calm, even serene, as she turned it toward me.

"Father is telling us about the arrangements for tomorrow morning," I said, "and wanted to know where you were, so I came after you. 'He who must be obeyed,' you know," I quipped.

"Yes, I know," she said, rising, and together we walked back into the sitting room, where my father greeted Katharine cordially, and then immediately began to describe the arrangements he had made.

"That seventeenth floor is one they keep for transients," he said, "and one wing with only a few rooms is even now being emptied, all the guests being transferred to other rooms on some pretext. I have given the manager a detailed description of Ruth Hayes, and when she registers—whether under that name or any other, she will be told there are only two or three rooms on that floor available. She will be given one of them, while various guards of mine will be installed in others of that wing, especially those on either side of the one that the Hayes woman chooses."

"What about me?" Dicky asked.

My father looked at him speculatively for an instant, then spoke with decision.

Dicky To Be There

"Yes," he said; "I'll see that you have a room up there. Margaret can pretend to be busy in there and in the vacant rooms when she's not passing through the halls."

Into Dickey's eyes as he looked at me, there flashed a mischievous glint, and I knew he was recalling—and meant me to remember — his burlesqued threat of keeping me on the run" with calls of "Maid!" But the only comment he made was a brief "Thank you, Dad. I appreciate that," and then my father went on:

"I have engaged a room on the fifteenth floor on the other side of the building for you at eight o'clock tomorrow morning, Margaret," he said. "Have you told Richard what you are to do, and has he gotten in touch with Halloran?"

I found myself fuming in chagrin at my failure to deliver his message.

"I told him everything except your remark about Halloran," I said. "I am so sorry, Father."

Dicky to the Rescue

"Don't blame her, Dad!" Dicky struck in instantly. "It wasn't her fault. I was pestering her to about the most disgusting that I'm afraid I drove everything else out of her mind."

My father's lips twitched.

"There is no harm done," he said. "I simply want you to be outside, so that the call won't go through the switchboard, get in touch with Halloran, and ask him to be at Room 603 the Van Sittart hotel at eight-ten tomorrow morning. Tell him he is to bring makeup and gray wigs, but do not give any details or any names to him."

"I understand, sir," Dicky said, "and I'll attend to it at once."

"Please come back here as soon as you've finished," my father added. "There are details to discuss about that possible—perhaps I should say probable — after midnight interview with Ruth Hayes."

"If Halloran is in, I'll be back in ten minutes," Dicky promised.

"If he isn't," my father said, "don't wait; you can get him later. I want to get everything settled about the visit we expect from the Hayes woman."

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Blood Pressure a Mystery

Physicians have been taking the blood pressure regularly in every patient they see for over 40 years. The blood pressure apparatus is now as much a part of a physician's regular equipment which he carries from house to house and uses on all of his patients as the stethoscope.

One would think that by this time everything about blood pressure had been settled. I used to collect literature on blood pressure. I started to put it in a book case in a filing system at my office and then I carried it home and put it in the cellar and it accumulated so that it ran up the walls like an erysipelas and finally reached the attic. And I had made only a partial collection. (P.S. My wife, poor wretch, made me throw it all out.)

One would think also that from this accumulation of literature that everything about blood pressure had been written. But it is not so. I doubt whether when even an accomplished practitioner of medicine takes a blood pressure and looks at a result he has the slightest idea how little information he has obtained.

This was brought forcefully to my attention about a year ago when I was trying to find out how many people at a certain age had a blood pressure over and a blood pressure under 150 systolic. I knew perfectly well what the average blood pressure of a man at the age of 50 is—the life insurance companies have told us that—but I did not want the average blood pressure. I wanted to know what the incidence of a blood pressure over 150 is—how many people have it.

I went to the directors of two life insurance companies in my neighborhood and found out not only that they did not know, but that all the literature they had on actuarial tables did not tell them. I then wrote to the medical directors of six life insurance companies in the United States and found that they did not know, but two of them very kindly consented to go over their figures and give me the results. These showed—to stick to one age in order to simplify this discussion—that at the age of 50 about 10 per cent of people had a systolic blood pressure of 150 or over.

This is supposed to be the upper limit of normal, but obviously the life insurance statistics deal with a selected group. A man at the age of 50 does not submit himself to a life insurance examination if he knows he has high blood pressure or if he is being treated for low blood pressure or if he had high blood pressure in the past.

I therefore sent our questionnaires to a number of my professional colleagues and asked them to give me the figures on consecutive patients that they saw in the office and in the hospital. I also collected a number of my own on consecutive unselected patients. The results of this investigation of those who were confessedly sick showed that about 50 per cent of people at the age of 50 had a blood pressure over 150. This would indicate that high blood pressure at the age of 50 was more normal than abnormal because more people had it.

These figures of mine are substantiated by a study just completed which shows that on taking the blood pressure of about 15,000 people over 40 years of age the systolic blood pressure was 150 or over as follows: From age 40 to 50 in 13 per cent; ages 50 to 60 in 30 per cent; ages 70 to 79 in 58 per cent and from 80 to 89 in 81 per cent.

This averages pretty well my own findings of the group of insurance cases (in good health) and the group who were under medical care.
